Tartana Copper Sulphate Revenue Clarification

R3D Resources Limited (the Company) has been made aware of revenue forecasts being stated in promotional material produced on behalf of the Company with respect to the Tartana heap leach – solvent extraction – crystallisation plant located on the Tartana mining leases. The Company earlier included a statement in a video presented by OnMarket that may have been construed to be a revenue statement. The statement related to past performance of the copper sulphate plant. It was not the intention of the Company for the statement to be considered a revenue projection and accordingly the statement is retracted.

The Company does not endorse the statements made nor does it have reasonable grounds to support revenue forecasts and, as such, investors should not rely on them and should instead rely on information provided by directly the Company and released on the ASX platform.

As reported in the R3D Resources Prospectus dated 26 May 2021, the Company is investigating the restart of this plant which has been held on care and maintenance since 2014. The Company has stated that it is investigating restarting copper sulphate production to potentially supplement and replace cashflow currently being generated by the export of Zeehan zinc low grade furnace slag/matte to South Korea.
